

Charlie Mulholland:

Head of News Manifesto

I want to give all people access to the Shock website to post articles, whether it be for the main news section or it be the sport or music section. We all know Salford Now is a great platform to publish your articles for the university. However, I want to take away the 'only Salford' limitation and allow many aspiring writers to public articles about news stories from across Manchester. Whether it be interviews with music artists, to top ten lists, to events that have taken place across Greater Manchester, Shock Radio will be the platform for anyone to post, as long as it has our editor's approval of course. After all, we are Manchester's number one student station, we should be number one in terms of news too. I also want maintain the top of the hour bulletins that have been running smoothly this year, and provide more people the chance to have their voices heard. I will take on all applications for the bulletin roles and assign people times that work around their university schedule. I want people to have a platform where they are proud to show off their work and feel like they can contribute to the station over all.

Treasurer

I am willing to listen to all ideas about how we can improve shock, not just the studio but our socials as well. One thing I am passionate about improving is the Pre-Rec Room. I am hearing about the issues people who record either their podcasts or shows, and I want to improve equipment in the room. I will look into getting new microphone for the main studio as well, as many members of the society have made complaints about having microphones go down when they have a multi-person show. This makes it awkward for those who have to share a microphone. If we can afford a brand-new system, we can afford new mics. As for socials, I will look into funding more promotional material to encourage more people to go. I will be looking to expand on the fantastic job that Megan has done this year and try and manage shock's finances as best I can.
